

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

"The Stars shine bright in fields of blue;
They light the way where row on row
Is marked the resting place of you
Who peaceful sleep where poppies grow.

* * * * *

The fight is o'er; your faith we've kept;
The torch you flung burns brighter still—
And though in Flanders field you slept—
It led to victory—God's will."

Introduction

When the Indiana Historical Commission decided early in 1919 to issue a series of publications recounting the history of our State's part in the World War, it was agreed that the first volume should be dedicated to the Gold Star men and women of Indiana. Believing that first honor should be paid to those heroes who had laid down their lives for their country's honor, it was decided to give special attention to their records, and to prepare a volume worthy of their sacrifices.

A careful check was made from the daily casualty lists published in the United States Official Bulletin, beginning with the first name printed, that of James B. Gresham—who was not only the first man from Indiana, but the first of the Americans to fall in battle after the United States entered the war,—on through the entire list. The checking of names was continued until the publication of the Official Bulletin was suspended. The name and address of every man and woman reported from Indiana as having been killed in action, died from wounds, died of disease, or from other causes, was copied and classified according to the county in which they had lived. In addition to this, a careful check was made of the casualty lists published in the Indianapolis newspapers, covering the entire period of the war, and running on down until the close of the year 1920, with the view of obtaining the name of every Indiana soldier, sailor, marine, and nurse, who had died while serving with the fighting forces of the United States and the allies during the World War. Also, an examination was made of the casualty lists sent out by the Adjutant General in Washington to the state Adjutant General of Indiana in the July, 1920, with the view of including any additional names that had been omitted from the files of the Official Bulletin or from the lists published in the newspapers.

The names prepared from all these different sources were then classified according to counties, and the lists were in turn sent to the local county committees to be verified. A special questionnaire was printed and also sent to the committees to be filled out for each name. When the records were completed they were returned to the office of the Historical Commission, and from these the biographical sketches were prepared for the volume.

None except those directly connected with the details of the work in assembling these thousands of records can ever realize the immense amount of labor involved in preparing a memorial volume of this kind. An effort has been made to obtain the following information for every record included in this volume: Names of the parents, date and place of deceased's birth, his occupation, the date and place where he entered service, camps where trained, a brief statement of his service record, the date and place of his death, and the place of burial.

Special efforts have also been made to obtain a photograph in every case. This part of the work has been unbelievably successful. Photographs of every imaginable description have been received. In numerous cases the parents have entrusted to us the last and only photograph in their possession, showing their eagerness to cooperate in this memorable work. Had this phase of the work been delayed for even the short period of two or three years it is doubtful if fifty per cent of the photographs could have been obtained. It is indeed a great satisfaction to us to be able to report that in the handling of the thousands of pictures, not one has been lost.

The chief regret in assembling a memorial volume of this kind is the physical limitation that prevents giving greater space to the individual records of these heroes. If it were possible, an entire page or more should be given to each record. Copies of letters written by the chaplain, nurses, and comrades, who were present during the last moments lived by these men and women have been gathered and filed with most of the records, but unfortunately they can not be printed in the limited space allotted in the volume. Under the plan adopted, that of placing five records to the page, together with their photographs, it has made a volume of considerably more than six hundred pages. But to have condensed the sketches more than has been done, or to have reduced still more the size of the photographs, would have been entirely unwise, if not ungrateful.

In preparing a volume of this kind where the records run into the thousands, it is too much to hope that the work will be entirely free from errors. Especially is this true in regard to the military and naval units mentioned in certain cases. Oftentimes utterly contradictory reports have been received regarding the same individual's record. But in every case a sincere effort has been made to determine the exact unit and branch of service in which he was enrolled, and to give a brief sketch of his service record. If from the brief sketches herewith produced the sons and daughters of later generations learn something of the heroic services rendered by these men and women, and of the sacrifices they made, then this volume will have served the purpose for which it was published.

Special mention should be made here of the splendid work performed by the local committees in the different counties in collecting the Gold Star records. Too much credit can not be given to these loyal, earnest workers, who so nobly assisted in this great cause. Without their co-operation this volume would never have been a success. Earnestly and patiently they labored, week after week, and month after month, going about over the county, interviewing the parents and next of kin, in an effort to secure the information asked for on the questionnaire, and to obtain a photograph of these heroes. They gave their time and labor freely in this sacred work, and many of them expended considerable sums out of their own private income in order to gather the records from their county and permanently preserve them. To these earnest and untiring workers, the Indiana Historical Commission is forever indebted.

To Lee Burns of Indianapolis, the editor is especially indebted for his many valuable suggestions in helping to select the cover design, paper, and binding used in preparing this volume for publication. His advice and professional services have always been at the disposal of the Commission, and his council has been of great help.

To Indiana's Gold Stars

"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." How forcibly do these immortal words, uttered by the Man of Galilee nearly two thousand years ago, bring home to us the patriotism and love of country of the three thousand three hundred and fifty-four sons and fifteen daughters of Indiana who laid down their lives for their neighbors and friends, for their country and civilization.

If we knew the exact circumstances surrounding the final moments of each life, words could not paint the story nor recount the depth of the sacrifice made by these heroes of ours. We can only say that when the honor of the flag and the cause of humanity was at stake they freely gave their lives.

Thousands upon hundreds of thousands of Hoosiers in their daily vocations and in every civilian war activity, in training camp, and on the battle field, were striving for America in the great World War. Of this number, less than four thousand were called upon to sacrifice their lives. It is by way of tribute to these that this book has been created.

We will look upon it as a memorial to Indiana's dead in the World War, and such it is; but a more lasting memorial has been erected in the hearts of their neighbors and their friends, a memorial that will endure long after this book shall have perished, and will be handed down from generation to generation so long as Hoosier hearts beat true to the music of our American ideals.

As we turn the pages of Indiana's Gold Star Book we will catch something of the inspiration which led these boys and girls on, something of the heroism that steeled their nerves in the hour of trial. If we can feel this, if we can understand how great the sacrifice by the families and friends of these fallen ones, we will be better Americans than we have been before, and will not ourselves, nor permit others, if in our power to prevent, to lay careless or unfriendly hands upon the institutions of our country.

I wish I were able to say that which is in my heart in tribute to these fallen heroes of ours, that I might in some way lighten the burden of those who mourn their loss. They were sons and daughters worthy of the men and women of Indiana of other days.

By their sacrifice they have shown to the world that American manhood and womanhood is just as brave as in the early days of the Republic. They died for us and for our country. Let each one of us so live and so serve the state and nation as to preserve and make better the institutions for which they gave the last full measure of devotion.

JAMES BETHEL GRESHAM, Corporal, Sixteenth Infantry

The first American to give his life on the battlefields of France after the armed forces of the United States began military operations against Germany was a Hoosier lad, James Bethel Gresham, of Evansville, Indiana. The impressive ceremonies held at the time of his funeral, and that of the two comrades who fell during the same raid that caused Corporal Gresham's death, are particularly appropriate to Indiana's Gold Star Volume. General Bordeaux, the French commander of the sector in which the raid occurred, near Bathelemont, accompanied by his full staff, infantry, artillery, and engineer chiefs, and a representative of the French Corps commander, had charge of the ceremonies. As the bodies of these first heroes were lowered in the graves, a company of United States Infantry fired three volleys, and the trumpeter sounded taps. General Bordeaux delivered the following address:—

"In the name of the Eighteenth Division, in the name of the French Army, and in the name of France, I bid farewell to Corporal Gresham, Private Enright, and Private Hay, of the Sixteenth Infantry, American Army.

"Of their own free will they had left their happy and prosperous country to come over here. They knew that the war continued in Europe; they knew that the forces fighting for honor, love, justice, civilization, were still checked by the long-prepared forces which are serving the powers of brutal domination, oppression, barbarity. They knew that an effort was still necessary.

"They ignored nothing of the circumstances. Nothing had been concealed from them—neither the length nor hardships of this war, nor the violence of the battle, nor the dreadfulness of the new weapons, nor the perfidy of the foe. Nothing stopped them. They had accepted to lead a hard and strenuous life; they had crossed the ocean despite great peril; they had taken their place on the front by our side; they have fallen facing the foe in a hard and desperate hand-to-hand fight. Honor to them! Their families, their friends, and their fellow-citizens will be proud when they learn of their death.

“Men: These graves, the first to be dug in our national soil, at but a short distance from the enemy, are as a mark of the mighty hand of our allies, firmly clinging to the common task, confirming the will of the people and Army of the United States to fight with us to a finish; ready to sacrifice as long as it will be necessary, until final victory for the noblest of causes—that of liberty of nations, the weak as well as the mighty.

“Thus the death of this humble corporal and of these two private soldiers appears to us with extraordinary grandeur. We will therefore ask that the mortal remains of these young men be left here—be left to us forever. We will inscribe on their tombs: ‘Here lie the first soldiers of the United States Republic to fall on the soil of France for Justice and Liberty.’ The passer-by will stop and uncover his head. The travelers of France, of the allied countries, of America, the men of heart who will come to visit our battle-field of Lorraine, will go out of their way to come here,—to bring to these graves the tribute of their respect and of their gratefulness.

“Corporal Gresham, Private Enright, Private Hay: In the name of France, I thank you. God receive your souls. Farewell!”

"Some as peaceful as rocked by a mother's hand,
Are lying asleep in a foreign land,
Where the long white rows of crosses stand.

And o'er fallen heads that are lying low,
Where none but God and the angels know,
The wheat shall spring and the poppies glow."

The Golden Stars

'Tis Maytime and the joys of life are green.
Thro' the bleak winter they were stripped and bare,
Their leaves were blown afield, you were not there
But far away and the great sea between!
Now you are back with honor, with the sheen
Of Victory on your helmets. From his lair
The brutal foe is driven in despair
And you are home beneath a sky serene!
We sent you forth with blessings, yet the fears
Of hideous slaughter smote upon our ears—
But now at last we greet you as of yore!
The white stars here again! Yet mid our cheers
We still can see, across a blur of tears,
The golden stars—of those who come no more!

WILLIAM DUDLEY FOULKE, Richmond, Indiana.

"I'll sow my poppies by the sea, through sunny fields and swampy ways,
To feed the fire in us to flame, adown the lonely future days,
In memory of the lads we gave, with aching hearts, but no regret;
I'll scatter wide my poppies red, a living sign, 'We'll not forget!'"

"This day we pause, with hearts intent,
While overhead our firmament
Is thick with stars;
And in this hushed, momentous hour
We look above, and feel the power
Of sacrifice.
But here and there in starry height
We catch a beam that shines more bright—
A gleam of gold.
Oh, stars of gold! Alas, thy light
That flashes on our startled sight
Brings message dread."

Of God; they bloom eternally with Him
And deck His gardens on the farther rim
Of Paradise, and 'midst the chosen few
Of men, they still are shining fresh and new
And pointing to the nations now unborn
The way of duty, and the path of morn."

"Here a cross and there a mound.
Thus they sleep, Silent sleep.
Sheltered by the kindly ground.
Vigil keep!
For they have not died in vain.
In the groves of Compiegne
Still their spirits fight again
And glory reap.

Traveler, plait a laurel wreath
Of a girth, majestic girth,
Lay it where they sleep beneath
With Mother Earth.
So may rose and twisting vine
With the laurel intertwine,
Nature's ever vernal shrine
To their worth."

CARLETON B. McCULLOCH, Indianapolis, Indiana.
Written at Compiegne, France, in May, 1918.

The Sacrifice Supreme

So young in years yet brave in might
Of loyal heart and mind well blent.
Abiding faith had he in right,
In joyous song and merriment.
In him were mixed without alloy
Ingredients of pure filial love
Reflected in parental joy
And reverence for Him above.
With gleaming face and buoyant cheer,
To country loyal through and through,
Unfaltering step, no cringing fear,
He marched straight in death's rendezvous.
Glorious the race which he has run!
Peace, eternal life, well won!

"But in these halls shall linger, ever strong and young,
A timeless Youth, about whose shining head is hung
An aureole of glory. We go out at night,
And see, far sparkling, up through all the heavenly space,
Those glistening stars that never fade, whose wondrous light
Comes radiant to the ageing earth. And so the bright
Remembrance of those gallant lads whom we call dead
Shall through the years bring clear each glowing youthful face."

"No pang is suffered He does not know;
No heart is wounded He shall not heal;
Today, in the midst of the sad world's woe
There is no sorrow He does not feel;
The widow, the orphan—whose hearts are cold,—
Who see no dawn in the darkened sky,—
His stricken children,—this hope may hold,
'Jesus of Nazareth passeth by.'"

YE ARE NOT DEAD

"In Flanders still the poppies grow
Among the crosses, bending low,
On fragile stems, their cups of red
Like censers swinging o'er the dead
That fell short days ago.

Ye are not dead! If it were so
We that abide could never go
As blithely marching by your bed
In Flanders fields.

Because your bodies lie below,
Above, with an intenser glow,
The Torch moves on; in your brave stead
Men dare to bleed as ye have bled—
That larks may sing, and poppies blow
In Flanders fields."

FRANK E. HERING, South Bend, Indiana.

Days of danger, nights of waking,
With the weary heart still breaking,
"Soldier, rest, thy warfare o'er," for the Homelights brightly glow!
Though this golden star will glisten;
Yet we oft will pause and listen
For the son asleep in sunny France where the crimson poppies blow!

"Some day, some time—
All wars will cease,
But not until that day
When good meets evil—and walks on
As calm and fearless as the dawn
That knows the night is powerless
'Gainst the coming of the light;
Until that day
When Love meets hate—and still remains
Unchanging love—
Then wars will cease!"

IVA B. LINEBARGER, Rockville, Ind.

TO INDIANA'S SOLDIER DEAD

"Whatever else Indiana may have lacked, she has not been wanting in a sense of proportion. Always she has been reasonably proud of her sons and daughters, whether they abode at home or wandered to the uttermost part of the earth. She has cherished and protected their good names and fame, whether these happened to be writ large on large affairs or only in the sign manual of the average man.

Proud of her enterprise, her intelligence, her material success, nevertheless she has been always a Roman Cornelia—her children have been her jewels.

Like many mothers, she has tried to love them impartially but has failed. Born into the Union when the question of the extension of human slavery first arose, she took her stand on freedom's side. Since that far-off year there has been no pulsing moment that her soul has not been aflame with love of liberty. All else she counts as dross, if by its sacrifice happily she may preserve this one essential birthright of mankind. So, though all her children are her jewels, the ones she wears within her diadem are those who dare to go, in the defense of that birthright, to what the thoughtless call death, but what the wise know to be glory.

Always her sons have gladly offered themselves as sacrifices for faith, for friendship, and for freedom. Their country's call has been to them the voice of God. When they go forth, full armed with the sacred traditions of the state, little think they of their own salvation, if by their blood, truth and justice and freedom are saved.

Why the just must suffer for the unjust, I do not know, I can not tell, yet this I know: That always the progress of the human race is marked by tombstones and not by milestones. Just now it is being marked as never before and on them are being carved the names of Indiana's bravest, truest, and tenderest sons. Unhappy and unworthy children of this state who stay at home if they fail, with sad and loving hearts, to uncover this day and salute the memory of these, our pride, our glory, and our hope.

Oh, broken-hearted one, most men would tell you they are dead. I dare say unto you: Nay, they are not dead, nor can they die. Their bodies have been sown in the fields of Flanders and of France, but their souls shall be raised in immortality to walk the wide world round while men love liberty and long for brotherhood. Yes, weep this day for the touch of a vanished hand, but when the tears have fallen, exult that Indiana bears heroes and martyrs,—not cowards, not slaves.

Farewell to the mortal! Hail to the immortal!"

From address of Vice-President Thomas Riley Marshall,
Indianapolis, September 22, 1920.
